COMMERCIAL INTELLIGENCE

THURSDAY EVENING, SEPTEMBER 1.

The New York exchange has recovered to 4·78½ per £, but otherwise there is nothing of a favourable character as regards the outlook for Money. The Bank of England return to-morrow will probably throw some light on the position, as we shall then be able to see to what extent the prohibition of the sale of Bar Gold has had effect. Our idea is that the return will prove decidedly unfavourable; but if not we may count on Securities taking an upward turn. In the meantime Consols yesterday were unchanged at 99⅛, and the 3½ per cent. Sterling Loan at 102¾; but French Rentes come one per cent. lower at 115½, an unmistakeably adverse feature. Enfaced Rupee Paper is weaker; Fours being ¼ lower at 82½, Fours-and-a-half ¼ down at 89¾. Hongkong Bank shares are quoted £1-10 lower at £47.

In the General Produce markets there is no change, and the weekly quotations for Metals are unaltered.

Piece-goods in Manchester continue quiet; but the Liverpool Cotton market yesterday, Reuter says showed an increased enquiry, which was freely met. The sales reached 10,000 bales, and although spot prices were unchanged, Americans to arrive were 3-32d. to 1-16d. per lb. higher. In New York the quotation for ready Mid.-Uplands was unaltered at 13¼ cents, but the corrected price for November shipment comes 11·01 cents per lb. The telegrams to-morrow will have considerable interest, as, unless we are much mistaken, the ready price will show a material fall. If not we must accept the idea that the crop is calculated to be at least much later, if not materially smaller, than most people have been calculating upon. The receipts at the ports yesterday were 8,000 bales, as against 5,000 for the same date last year.

The result of the Council draft biddings in London yesterday is scarcely what was expected on this side. The general opinion was that if a limit of 1s. 7¾d. was fixed, the whole amount would not be taken up, or on the other hand that 1s. 7 13-16d would be accepted. The Government, however, have again apparently formed a fairly correct judgment of the position, and in getting 1s. 7¾d. have done better than most people expected. The demand for additional remittance moreover still continues, shipments of Silver being advised of £10,000 for Bombay and £30,000 for Calcutta, in addition to which £30,000 in Gold is passed for this port. These features combined certainly do not look like easier exchange, and it is almost surprising that the effect on the market here to-day has not been more important. Bank Bills have advanced 1-32d, and Private Paper partially to the same extent; but there has been no great extent of firmness apparent, and that the market has been very steady is about all that can be said. Closing quotations are:—

Bank Bills on demand	.. ..	1s. 7 27-32d.	per rupee
Do. telegraphic	.. ..	1s. 7 13 16d.	,,
Do. 3 months' sight	..	1s. 8 1-32d.	,,
Credits, 3	,, ,,	1s. 8 5-32d.	,,
Documents, 3	,, ,,	1s. 8 3-16d.	,,
Francs 3	,, ,,	2·12½d.	,,

Government Paper to-day, all things considered, has been remarkably steady, and rates close at par for Fours, and Rs. 109 for Fours-and-a-half. The settlement of the time-bargains, although not quite so good as it might have been, has certainly proved better than was anticipated, and investors have accordingly shown much more courage. We have still to see the end of the bargains for the 15th and 25th delivery; but nothing of a seriously adverse character is anticipated.

Shares to-day have been a shade steadier. Bank of Bombays have advanced to Rs. 725. Colaba Land Co. are unaltered, but Port Cannings are Rs. 2½ higher at Rs. 225. Press Companies as a general rule are unaltered; but our rates mark a decline of Rs. 50 in Sind and Punjab, and Rs. 45 in Volkart's. Spinning and Weaving Mill shares are steadier, with a very general recovery of Rs. 5 per share.

Cotton continues very quiet, and for export we may still say that there is nothing doing. Prices are nominally unaltered, and it is evident we shall not have much of importance doing until after the rains are well over and fresh supplies begin to come forward from up-country.

Seeds are unaltered. Wheat is quieter under the influence of less favourable news from home, and Rs. 34 is now the quotation for Soft White.

In Freights we have not heard of any new business during the day. For early loading an active demand prevails for steam tonnage, but December-January loading boats are offering with out finding takers.

Piece-goods are quiet at previous prices, both as regards ready and future business.

Coals are steady but unchanged.

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 2, 1881.

In publishing as we do to-day the last of the very able and interesting letters in which Mr. Wedderburn has brought forward his scheme for the restoration of credit in the Dekkhan, we feel that we cannot too earnestly recommend the proposals to the consideration of those who have the power to give them effect. It is not denied—we do not think it can be denied, and we are far from supposing that there is anywhere a disposition to gloss over existing facts—that we have come to a crisis in the Dekkhan, and that the Ryots' Relief Act has only intensified the evil it was meant to cure. Mr. Wedderburn has shown that the plan he proposes has done good in similar circumstances elsewhere. In this fourth letter, we may say in passing, Mr. Wedderburn alludes to one instance with regard to which a confirmation of his views, of which he could not have been aware when he wrote, reached us only by last mail. The British Consul at Alexandria, in reporting on the trade of Egypt for the last year, has occasion to note that there has been an increase of about eighty per cent. in the imports of machinery, chiefly from Great Britain, into that country. This increase Mr. Cookson ascribes entirely to purchases of agricultural machines by the fellaheens through the agency of the "Credit Foncier Egyptien," to which Mr. Wedderburn alludes, and other banking establishments that have sprung up so rapidly of late. These institutions supply the Egyptian peasant cultivators with the capital he needs, just as the Dekkhan ryot needs it: and to their development, along with the improvements in the administration of the country, Mr. Cookson ascribes the regeneration of the Egyptian peasant "from a state of almost hopeless misery." There is not, and never was, any comparison between the grinding tyranny under which the Egyptian peasant groaned and any British administration in India. But both systems, from different motives and with correspondingly different degrees of responsibility, have undoubtedly, we think, erred in this, that the peasant has been allowed to go on from year to year repeating his failures to perform an impossible task; while, in each case, the Government, that failed to provide him with the straw, have none the less insisted on their full tale of bricks. In Egypt reform could not be had but at the expense of a revolution in the Government. We are happy in that there is no such necessity here. All that is wanted is that the Government should open its ears to the cries of those who are ready to perish; and, to borrow our correspondent's words, that they "should not withhold the cup of refreshing water which will strengthen the weak hands and confirm the feeble knees" of those who are dependent upon them.

It is somewhat remarkable that, considering the great interests which were at stake, and the fact that the Russo-Turkish war of 1877-78 very nearly succeeded in involving the British Army in a European campaign, comparatively little attention has been bestowed upon the lessons which may be drawn from a consideration of its details. Notwithstanding the fact that many English officers were spectators of this great campaign, or officially attached to either side, no complete account of the whole war has been officially published, although many interesting personal narratives have been given to the world. The Franco-German war of 1870-71 was certainly more interesting to us from a military point of view, because it afforded more striking lessons which, if applied with a due sense of their value, could not have failed to have been of essential importance to those who are responsible for the training of British troops for the purposes of war. We had long been used to look up to the French Army as an example of military perfection, and it was a rude shock to us to find that our trust in this perfection was shattered in a moment. The great centralised administration of the French Army, by which every essential order was issued from Paris; the discipline, the tactics, and the work of the subordinate departments, upon which the vitality of an Army so greatly depends; the conception of the campaign, and the mode of carrying it out, were all proved to be faulty in the extreme. On the other hand we found that a great national force which we had long looked upon until a comparatively late date as a mere militia, and had despised as slovenly in appearance, and in the outward bearing of the soldier's profession as wanting in all its highest characteristics, was really a machine thoroughly practical in its working, and capable of fulfilling everything that the nation and its rulers intended it should perform, with an organisation which we, in common with other nations, desire to adopt, notwithstanding the difficulties which the differences of position and of national life present to its execution. There can be no question that the Franco-German war gave a strong stimulus to the efforts of those who had for many years past lifted up their voices in vain to remind the British nation that the organisation of the Army was defective in the chief points which that organisation should embrace. The newspapers were flooded with articles pointing to the want of cohesion in the scattered forces of our Army; we were warned that we might justly tremble to think of what might happen to the whole disposable British Army in a single day, if employed in European warfare; and we were told in very plain language that our battalions of the line were merely isolated units of force, wholly unconnected with the Militia and Volunteers, that the Militia was only half trained, without leaders or organisation, that the Volunteers were merely an armed mob which no general officer could possibly employ with any confidence, that our artillery and cavalry were weak, that the administration of our Army was cumbrous, that it would tumble into chaotic confusion on the first shock of war, and that all the great departments of the Army upon which it depended for feeding, transport, and equipment were in a state of miserable inefficiency. We should be sorry to say that all the lessons which might be drawn from the Franco-German war have even in this decade been thoroughly applied; but no one who reviews impartially the history of military progress in England within the last ten years can deny that many important steps have been taken towards the ultimate result which it is desired to attain, that the nation may possess a compact and highly organised Army, having at its back a large national force for strictly defensive purposes. The changes that have been introduced have naturally had many opponents, and it can only be by a patient perseverance in the path of progress that we can hope to attain the results at which we aim. Whatever may be alleged as the faults of the new system it is obvious that we are on the whole in a better position than formerly for conducting an offensive campaign, or for assuring the real defence of England. The administration has been simplified, the line has been united with the Militia, considerable improvements have been effected in the training of the Volunteers and Militia, plans of mobilisation both for defensive and offensive warfare have been constructed, a considerable reserve has been formed, and the training and education of both officers and men have been vastly improved. When a rupture with Russia was imminent and the project was worked out for the despatch of certain army corps in case of necessity to take part in the struggle between Russia and Turkey, a marked improvement was evident in the power of putting in the field a considerable body of British soldiers, and in all the innumerable details which an arrangement of this kind comprises. But instead of being actors in the campaign, our Army was destined to be a passive spectator; but not the less was it imperative upon us to gather the experience to be learnt from the bloody battlefields of Turkey, and to make use of that experience in considering what lessons we should apply for our own benefit. An examination of the Russo-Turkish war should have shown that of all the lessons to be learnt, the most prominent is that which teaches the use of the spade in modern warfare, and the application of hasty fortification to the tactics of the battlefield. But there are many other considerations which we should do well to study in examining the details of the various campaigns; the necessity for thoroughly worked out plans for concentration by means of railways, the dependence of the health and efficiency of an Army upon well-organised administrative departments, the absolute obligation on those conducting great operations that there should be an elaborated plan of campaign, the military error of attacking strongly fortified positions by inferior forces, the mistake of attempting to bring troops in close formation under the fire of modern rifles, the enormous importance of a proper system of supply of ammuition in the field, are all points which merited close examination, and practical application to our own system of military organisation and training. But although these points are of the highest importance, there can scarcely be a doubt that the greatest lesson to be learnt from this war was from the extensive use made of hastily improvised fortifications on the field of battle, or in the defence of such a position as that of Plevna, to which was attracted the whole power of the Russian force. The influence of hasty fortifications tactically employed had long been rec

We have been requested by the Honorary Secretary to announce that at a meeting of the Theatre Committee held at Messrs. Soundy and Company's yesterday afternoon, it was decided that the plan of the seats in the Gaiety Theatre should be re-opened to the public at Messrs. Soundy and Company's on Tuesday, the 6th instant, and that gentlemen who have already come forward to support the movement in favour of a subscription shall be allowed the option up to Monday evening, the 5th instant, of retaining their seats under the present project for Wednesdays and Saturdays.

We have been asked to state that the announcement, being made in an advertisement published elsewhere, that the performance for the benefit of "the Thu-Zet Family" is to be given under the patronage of "Major-General Hewett and Staff," is quite unauthorized. Application was made to General Hewett for the patronage of himself and officers of the B.V.R., but was refused, on two separate occasions, in writing.

The number of deaths from cholera throughout the Bombay Presidency during the week ended August 26 was 1,399, as compared to 1,020 in the preceding week. And in some cases, as at Nasik and the Haveli taluka near Poona, it is merely stated in the district reports that there have been some deaths from cholera, without figures being given. The disease appears still to be worst in the Kandeish district, where 402 deaths and 901 cases were reported. The Ahmednagar district comes next with a sad record of 369 deaths and 838 cases, and the Sholapore district third with 156 deaths and 349 cases. In four talukas of the Surat district where the disease is still prevalent 132 deaths and 213 cases were reported. In Baroda city there were 32 cases and 59 deaths; in Ratnagiri district, 32 deaths (number of cases not mentioned); in Thana district (Kalyan, Bassein, Salsette, &c.), 31 deaths and 55 cases; in Ahmedabad, 12 deaths and 29 cases; in Poona city, 3 deaths; and in Mehmadabad (Kaira) and Ankleswar (Broach), each 2 deaths. In Bombay city there were last week 18 deaths, as compared to 22 the week before.

COLONEL WILLOUGHBY OSBORNE, C.B., Political Agent, Gwalior, has been seriously ill at Morar.

RECENT news from the Santhal Pergunnahs describe the Santhals as being again in a restless state.

THE Madras Mail remarks:—"Our new Governor 'kissed hands' at Osborne on the 15th August, and escaped Knighthood. This is rather fortunate for us. It is easy enough to talk familiarly of 'Grant-Duff,' but 'Sir Mountstuart Grant-Duff' would be a monthful. Probably he would object to being called 'Sir Mounty' for short. But the names 'Grant-Duff' are compact and euphonious."

THE Commissioner of the Presidency Division, Bengal, remarks in a recent report that, within the territory he administers, the Vernacular Press has no influence of any kind on the mass of the people. The ryot takes little interest in what goes on in the world. The educated tradesman who lives in Calcutta, or in the large towns of the division, reads the newspapers; but more out of curiosity, than with a view to getting opinions on affairs of the day. The Commissioner, Mr. F. B. Peacock, also reports that the tone of the Vernacular Press, which used to be so objectionable, has moderated since the passing of the Vernacular Press Acts of 1878. "It remains to be seen," says Mr. Peacock, "whether this salutary change will be maintained if those Acts are repealed."

THE Englishman remarks on the correspondence in connexion with the railway concession made to Messrs. Rothschild that one thing appears certain, viz., that 'the Government has narrowly escaped being drawn into an arrangement still more prejudicial to the interests of the public. The fact that Messrs. Rothschild have been called on to decide at once whether they will take up the Dakka-Mymensing line, and that, in case of other offers being made, or the Government desiring to construct any line, they can be required to decide within six months whether they will avail themselves of their option, is so far satisfactory that it shows that the reservation of these lines to the concessionaires is not absolute. The value of the qualification, however, depends to a great extent on the conditions which the Rothschilds can claim. Suppose, for instance, that other parties should offer to construct any of the lines on favourable terms, can the Government require the Rothschilds to take up the concession on at least equally favourable terms as a condition of their obtaining the preference? or have certain terms been fixed, on which they can claim such preference, irrespectively of the conditions of the rival offer? Even in the case of the Dakka-Mymensing line it is not, apparently, stated on what terms the Rothschilds are required to surrender or avail themselves of the preference. It is hard enough to believe that the Secretary of State could have reserved the option of constructing certain lines to any one, without some definite understanding as to at least the more essential terms of the concession; but it is harder still to believe that, having reserved such option to any one, he can have called on them to decide at once whether they will construct the line without stating definitely the terms they are required to accept or refuse."

A "TRAVELLER" writes to an up-country contemporary to suggest an improvement to the P. and O. Company. He remarks that "when the P. and O. steamer arrives in Bombay harbour, a scene of the most terrible confusion ensues. The majority of the passengers do not know whether they should land at once, or whether it would be advisable to wait till the vessel takes up her final position. Then, as to custom-house work, few are aware what they may take ashore, and if the boxes and baggage will be examined on board or elsewhere. The P. and O. Company could very easily arrange for printed or written notices being stuck up by the companion-stairs, giving clear and precise information on all points of this nature, in which passengers are likely to be interested. I landed in Bombay in January last. The confusion was something terrible. Directly the vessel stopped, the deck was invaded by visitors and by coolies; and there was such a press, and throng, and clamour, that it was with the greatest difficulty the passengers' baggage could be removed. And when it reached the foot of the gangway, this same baggage had to be carried over three or four boats, till the boat engaged for the shore trip could be reached. Again, only one gangway was in use; and when crowds of people are streaming up, and just as eager crowds are streaming down this anything but agreeable staircase, there is a great danger of accidents occurring, to say nothing of the inconvenience to all ascending or descending. Surely it would be possible to reserve one gangway for those about to leave the ship, and at this gangway the P. and O. lighter might also be in attendance. But if this is too much, the P. and O. might at any rate take care that 'some order is kept on board, when their vessels come into port."

THE acting Governor of Madras, the Hon'ble Mr. Hudleston, has been expressing doubts as to the stability of the Madras harbour works, and the local Mail thus takes up the cudgels on behalf of the Engineer, Mr. Parkes:—"A more forcible illustration of the pernicious influence that is exerted upon the Government of this Presidency by their retirement for seven or eight months of the year to Ootacamund could hardly be furnished than that connected with their present scare about the Madras Harbour. It was not much to their credit that, exactly a year ago, their minds were so enervated that they yielded to a panic-stricken fear of the loyalty of the few Mahomedans who shivered in their scanty clothing in the uncongenial drizzle of the local Capua; and it will be some time, we guess, before we forget the formidable military and police forces were concentrated on Government House. But this scare about the harbour is even more discreditable; and the Secretary of State will probably form a poor opinion of the Government who have entertained a grave alarm about a great public work without first ascertaining, from the best available sources, whether or no there was cause for apprehension. It will not be sufficient for the Government to shelter themselves behind Colonel Sankey and Captain Taylor. Those officers are not marine engineers; and though no one will dispute their ability in their special branches of work, most people will consider that the Governor should have hesitated about entertaining and ventilating the pessimist views of the harbour which, it is surmised, those gentlemen have adopted. Moreover, the Government have shown much unreasonableness in postponing the formation of the Port Trust until the alarm that they have conjured up has been set at rest. If it be admitted, for the sake of argument, that there is room to doubt the stability of the works, then there must be good cause for "taking another opinion,"—that is, competent opinion; but meanwhile the Government should avail themselves of the services of a Board of Trustees to administer the harbour as long as it stands. Mr. Hudleston's speech at the Legislative Council on the 26th ultimo acquires importance from the high position which he at present fills; and as he is usually remarkable for his caution and reserve, it is surprising that he has gone out of his way to play the part of Jeremiah. If matters wore the grave aspect that he, in his seclusion at Ootacamund, fancies they do, it would have been more statesmanlike on his part to have admitted very little, until he had had the doubts sifted to the bottom. But he did not take the precaution of subjecting the doubts which were communicated to him, and which he caught as easily as one might the measles, to practical tests; for he gave the sanction of his approval as Governor to them, and sent them forth with his gubernatorial imprimatur. . . . In short, the Governor would seem to have listened credulously to every thing that could be suggested against the harbour, and to have had no room left in his mind for the belief that Mr. Parkes should be a good deal better informed in his special line than the croakers. It is well that the Governor should hear both sides of so important a public question as that connected with the stability of the Madras harbour; but he has shown much indiscretion in giving his official support to those alarmist views of tyros that are opposed to conclusions on which a distinguished engineer has staked his reputation.

SERIOUS attention is being paid, the Pioneer understands, by influential Anglo-Indian students of the great currency question, to a proposal which has latterly been evolved from discussions on bi-metallism. The paper explains:—"This is a very simple proposal, and its realisation would not accomplish great results at once; but its tendency would be beneficial, and it might pave the way for further steps in the right direction. The proposal is that both the Indian and the English mints should coin a new silver piece equal in value to 34 annas. This piece would not import any new estimate of the value of silver into the Indian currency. It would contain just as much silver as properly belongs now to the value two rupees two annas. But the piece would, as a matter of fact, be worth just one-fifth of a sovereign at the bi-metallic ratio of 15½ to one. Now in England, for the present, the coin would be merely a subsidiary coin. It would not be legal tender for more than a very limited sum; and therefore it would not in any way disturb the orthodox mono-metallic position of the British currency. But to begin with, it would offer great facilities to the Bank of England if that institution were willing to exercise its right to hold a certain portion of its metallic reserve in silver. By keeping this silver reserve in the shape of coined 34-anna pieces, merchants in London would always be able to get silver in the most convenient form for remittance to India. This alone would confince to steady exchange, and would be a great convenience to Indo-British trade. Furthermore, a certain sphere of employment would be opened to silver, which would partially relieve the pressure on gold and the congestion of the silver market. For the new coin would be—on the hypothesis of the proposal in view—permitted to circulate in England as a subsidiary fourshilling piece. No new principle of which the orthodox need be afraid would be introduced so far. They could not honestly raise any objection to that arrangement. Nor should they object to permitting the amount for which silver is a legal tender at present to be slightly little—say, up to £5 instead of 40s. No principle adverse to average prices, bajri 46, jowari 66 pounds; bajri 41, jowari 57 pounds. Rain sufficient except in the east where it is wanted. Crops doing well. "KOOT HOOMI LAL SINGH."

(An extract from a Simla Operetta not by Messrs. Gilbert and Sullivan.)

HOKEY POKEY WANKEY WUM,
Long have you been the rummest of rum
Bogies to children; in burlesque
Long have you reigned o'er things grotesque;
But now we dethrone you, now we bring
A Himalayan mystical king,
Koot Hoomi Lal Singh.

Theosophy's king! Blavatsky and Co.
Discovered him first in his palace of snow;
Brought him to Simla; Sinnett and Hume
Crowned him with awe in a darkened room;
But he bolted away, like a bat on the wing,
And they worship him since as prophet and king,
Koot Hoomi Lal Singh.

Hokey Pokey Wankey Wum!
Well may your looks be jealous and glum;
You were never able to find
Bracelets in flower-beds, blown by the wind:
Children only your devotees,
You could never collect rupees,
Make clever wits go a-wandering,
Like this Himalayan "occult" king,
Koot Hoomi Lal Singh. HOOP-LA!

THE KHATAU MAKANJI S. AND W. COMPANY.

THE seventh ordinary general meeting of shareholders was held yesterday at the company's office, No. 67, Bazar Gate-street, Mr. Pandoorung Rahoba presiding.

The following is an epitome of the directors' report:—

"Out of the sum of Rs. 2,12,480-4-11, net profit of the year, Rs. 45,000 were absorbed in payment of an interim dividend up to 31st December, 1880, and Rs. 23,500 carried to Machinery Deterioration Fund, and Rs. 13,000 to Fire Insurance Fund. There remains a balance of Rs. 1,30,980-4-11, which, together with the balance of Rs. 290-13-3 brought forward from last year, makes the total amount of Rs. 1,31,250-2-2 to the credit of profit and loss account. Your directors are of opinion that in the true interest of the company it is absolutely necessary to strengthen the position of the company by gradually wiping off its debts, and with this view they recommend that a portion of the earnings be carried to a Reserve Fund. Your directors have the pleasure to recommend that the balance of profit and loss account be appropriated as follows:—In payment of a dividend at the rate of Rs. 70 per share, Rs. 70,000; in carrying to Reserve Fund, Rs. 60,000; to be carried forward to next year, Rs. 1,250-2-2—total Rs. 1,31,250-2-2. It is with feelings of deep and sincere regret that your directors have to announce to you the premature death of Mr. Dwarkadas Vasanjee, the senior member of the firm of the agents, and a director of the company. He was one of the promoters and founders of the company, and managed the affairs of the company with zeal and ability. In him the Board have lost a most valuable and an able coadjutor and adviser."

The following resolutions were then carried unanimously:—

Proposed by the Chairman, and seconded by Mr. Cursondas Valabhdas, that "the directors' report and audited balance-sheet and abstract of profit and loss account for the year ending 30th June, 1881, now read, be, and are hereby, received and adopted."

Proposed by Mr. Cursetjee Jehangir Tarachand, and seconded by Mr. Asar Lalji, that "a dividend at the rate of Rs. 70 per share for the half-year ending 30th June, 1881, be declared payable on and after Friday, the 2nd instant, to those shareholders whose names appear on the register this day, on production of share-certificates, and that Rs. 55,000 be carried to Reserve Fund."

INTERNATIONAL EXHIBITION OF ELECTRICITY AT PARIS.

PARIS, AUG. 10.

TO-DAY President Grévy will walk through the Exhibition of Electricity, and the various objects of interest will be pointed out to him. To-morrow it will be opened to the public. There will be no formal ceremony, for the condition of the exhibition is hardly such as to make this desirable. In fact, for some time to come the hammer and the pickaxe will be as distinctly heard as the whirling of machinery. For example, I may mention that in our own section not a single steam-engine has arrived, and for a few days, at least, it will be impossible for a single electric light to be shown there. Nor are we more backward than other nations. The Americans are in a similar plight, and the Germans, though having their base of operations uninterrupted by the sea, are not in a much better position. The smaller nations are quite ready, and France, with her superior facilities, is well advanced, and will make a most creditable show. In fact, she seems to be the only nation which has realized what a gigantic and important exhibition, scientifically and commercially, the present one will be. Still, when we remember that only a month has elapsed since the building came into the hands of the executive committee, it is remarkable to see what a wonderful feat has been accomplished.

Let me give some idea of the scale which this exhibition has reached. The nave of the building is 660ft. long and 160ft. wide, and there are upper galleries with space amounting to a quarter of this besides. Roughly speaking, there are at present 300 miles of conducting wires passing through the building. In the French section there are engines in sufficient number to produce a power of 1,600 horses, and the total amounts to over 2,000. There are already 200 dynamo-electric machines in position for producing the electric light and driving machinery by electricity, which may all be driven at the same time. There will sometimes be over 300 lamps of the powerful character known as are lamps all shining at the same time, while, without exaggeration, the number of incandescent lamps which can be used at once must be measured by the thousand. The conference-room, 60ft. square, is to be lit by 320 lamps of this kind. Mr. Edison has two large rooms to himself literally filled with those of his own type, Mr. Swan lights up the little theatre and other parts, and the Maxim lights have no mean place to fill. Every square-yard of the huge building has been claimed for exhibits, and there is only too little ground left for the perambulation of the public.

The visitor may, if he please, reach the building by means of the electrical tramcar of Messrs. Siemens which will actually enter the building, and runs for a quarter of a mile. But he will more probably do so by the main entrance. He will then have the French department on his right and that of other nations on his left. In front there is a lighthouse erected, complete with Fresnel's lenses and the electric light. At its base is an artistic pond, surrounded by turf and flowers, in which the electrical boats of M. Trouve will be seen in action. Beyond this and running along the whole length of the building are the boilers, steam engines, gas engines, and dynamo-electrical machines which supply electricity to nearly every part of the building. Here the machines of Gramme, Siemens, Brush, De Meritens, Crompton, and many others will be seen at work. The steam engines are fed from boilers of Belgian manufacture of tubular construction, and the flues lead to a brick chimney outside 110ft. in height. The galleries are not divided nationally so much as the nave, but the different rooms are apportioned to special classes of exhibits.

The western half of the nave, or French section, would require much space to describe. Their catalogue is divided into six groups, containing 16 classes. The most interesting of these relate to the development of electricity by batteries and machines, and the applications of electricity to telegraphy, electric light, transport of force, and electro-chemistry. But, besides these, I must mention their exhibition of cables, of telephones, microphones, and photophones, of electric clocks, and of historical apparatus and books. The Ministers of Posts and Telegraphs of War, of the Marine, and of Public Works all have fine collections. Numerous applications of electricity to the driving of sewing machines, lathes, drilling machines, &c., are also shown, besides the application of the late M. Menier on the large scale of ploughing with a machine giving 30 horse power. A large corner is given up to M. Faure to exhibit the action of his electric accumulator, concerning which the readers of The Times have gained some information from the letters of Sir William Thomson and others.

Turning now to the eastern half of the building, we find the different sections devoted to foreign nations. Their exhibits might be classed in the same way as the French, but in so general a sketch as the present this would be only a microscopic subdivision. I might say that the Dutch and Italian sections are echiefly historical, that the Belgian is chiefly telegraphic, that the German and Austrian combine this with railway signalling, of which I ought to have said that the French one is highly representative, and that the Spanish, Russian, Norwegian, and other sections are small and of a general character.

The British department owes its main interest to the following exhibits:—The Post Office shows a collection of all kinds of telegraphic apparatus used by Government from 1837 to 1881. This is a valuable collection, although it gives the appearance of our being a little antiquated in our methods in contrast with the French, who deal solely in modern apparatus and in some even which have hardly reached the practical stage. Messrs. Siemens have a large show of electric generators of all sizes, also of all kinds of apparatus required in telegraphy, whether aerial, subterranean, or submarine. They exhibit a large number of lights and a trophy, consisting of a large telegraph buoy, surmounted by a flag and surrounded by the various appliances of cable laying. Interesting telegraphic apparatus and specimens are shown by Latimer Clark, Muirhead and Co., the Indiarubber Company, the Submarine Telegraph Company, the Telegraph Construction and Maintenance Company, Messrs. Elliott, and Mr. Sabine. Electric lights will chiefly be shown by the following:—Mr. Swan (with 800 lamps working at once), Mr. Crompton (with eight arc lamps), Messrs. Siemens, the British Electric Light Company, Mr. Fyfe (with 20 arc lamps and 20 small ones). There are numerous exhibitors of telephones. Steam and gas engines suitable for driving dynamo-electric machines are shown by Messrs. Brotherhood, Robey, and Co., Ransomes, Head, and Co. (who exhibit an engine of 10 horse power like the one used for lighting the Embankment), and Thomson, Sterne and Co. Messrs. Saxby and Farmer made a fine show with their lock and block system of railway signalling. Mr. Spagnoleti exhibits in the same line. The historical exhibits are sent by King's College, the Royal Institution, the Society of Telegraph Engineers, besides the General Post Office. Among other of the most interesting things in the British section are Mr. Spottiswoode's large induction coils, Mr. Bright's fire alarms, and Sir William Thomson's electrometers and nautica appliances.—Times.

THE STANDARD LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANY.
ESTABLISHED 1825.

THE attention of intending Assurers is directed to the following points of this old established office:—
FUNDS.—These now considerably exceed FIVE-AND-A-HALF MILLION STERLING, and are larger than those of any British Office transacting business in India. Detailed statements showing the nature of the Investment are published annually.
ANNUAL REVENUE.—This has now reached EIGHT HUNDRED THOUSAND POUNDS.
CLAIMS.—The amount paid annually to the representatives of deceased Policy-holders is upwards of HALF-A-MILLION STERLING.
NEW BUSINESS.—Since 1865 the yearly New Assurances of the Company have exceeded ONE MILLION STERLING,—a result maintained by no other British Office for so many years in succession.
RATES.—These have lately been considerably reduced at most ages and will be found moderate. Lower rates are not justified by the Company's own experience,—now of considerable extent—nor by the most recent investigation into the mortality of European lives in India.
FACILITIES FOR ASSURANCE.—The Local Boards are empowered to issue Policies and pay claims without reference to Head office, and arrangements can be made for Medical Examinations in any part of India.
Forms of proposals, &c., and every information may be obtained on application.
